

Type 2 treatments

Type 2 treatments

Type 2 diabetes treatments | Diabetes UK

Skip to main navigation Skip to content

Save for later Page saved! You can go back to this later in your Diabetes and Me Close

Type 2 diabetes treatments

What is the main treatment for type 2 diabetes? The main treatments for managing blood sugar levels if you have type 2 diabetes are: Eating well and moving more Weight loss Metformin (usually taken as a tablet) Insulin along with other medication that helps lower blood sugar levels Other types of diabetes medicine that is injected or taken as tablets. Weight loss surgery Support with your emotional health Using a flash glucose monitor or continuous glucose monitor can also make it easier for people with type 2 diabetes to monitor their blood sugar levels without having to do so many finger prick checks. This tech isn't offered to everyone with type 2 diabetes. Find out if you may qualify for a flash glucose monitor or continuous glucose monitor on the NHS. We understand that being diagnosed with type 2 diabetes can be shocking and overwhelming, and we're here for you. We can offer you all the information, practical tips and guidance you need in bite sized blocks through our email support journey. When do I need medication for type 2 diabetes? Some people can manage their type 2 diabetes through healthy eating, being more active or losing weight. And some people have put their type 2 diabetes into remission through weight loss. Medication may be necessary to put your blood sugar levels in the healthy range. And you may be prescribed diabetes medication that can also help keep your heart healthy. So you may be taking a combination of treatments. Your healthcare team should consider what medication you are already taking, your preferences and make a shared decision with you about switching treatments or adding further medication. Diabetes medications are safe but like many other medications they may have side effects or interact with other medications you're taking. Because medicines can affect you in different ways, your healthcare team will speak to you about what's best and discuss any side effects. Even if you're taking medication for type 2 diabetes , it's still i

Save for later Page saved! You can go back to this later in your Diabetes and Me Close

Share this Page

© The British Diabetic Association operating as Diabetes UK, a charity registered in England and Wales (no. 215199) and in Scotland (no. SC039136). A company limited by guarantee registered in England and Wales with (no.00339181) and registered office at Wells Lawrence House, 126 Back Church Lane London E1 1FH

Back to Top

Brand Icons/Telephone check - FontAwesome    “ “
Header icons/tick icons/uk